THE CRISIS.

The debates in the Senate have taken a shape calculated to awaken the attention of the whole public to the danger of giving so much head to the obtrusions of the sensation press as has been done of late. Statement of a character intended to injure the President, the Secretary of War, and some of the commanding generals, have been made in various of these papers, and an artificial excitement has been created, the evident purpose of which was to precipitate some change favorable to the agitators. Disappointed contractors, greedy hangers-on, speculators, brokers in fat army jobs, and all the reckless train of cormorants living by the distribution of money from the national treasury, are chiefly the parties interested in these efforts; but many honest men have been inadvertently led to join in them, and the result has been disastrous.

If a Secretary of war can be changed, the newspaper correspondents whom he has prevented from prying into government may again resume their Minister, and the swarm of successful peccaries whom he has sent adrift may also come back to the public crib. To attack the War Minister successfully it is necessary to seek the shelter of a pretense to delude some popular general whom nobody assails, to foster an impression that he is the victim of an intrigue, and to assert that his operations have been impeded by the department. Under ordinary circumstances it is hardly worth while for the Senate to stoop to answer such attacks as those. But in the present instance great delusions have been created in the public mind, which have operated to take away its confidence in the integrity of the national administration. Any one with a very slight degree of acuteness may see at a glance that no enlistments are going on; that although two weeks have elapsed since the call was made for three hundred thousand additional troops, there is not yet a single new company in the field, nor any prospect of the whole contingent being obtained within the next three months. If the confidence of the people had not been impaired by these false reports, they would still continue to volunteer. But being told continually that the War Department is bolting all the plans of campaign and causing the slaughter of armies, they do not feel like wasting their lives, for which disposition no man of sense can blame them.

Collection of Taxes.

A writer estimates very truly, it seems, that the cost of collecting our internal revenue will be $3,629,260, upon an amount assumed to be $110,000,000. Another great army of hungry officials must be added to our civil list, and as the number of places is increased, the number of place-seekers will be likewise increased. There will be a heavy reinforcement to that army of loafers who go in periodically, once in four years, for some position where they can subsist on government rations and shirk government work. We have recently suggested that the new offices should be given to worthy soldiers who have been disabled in the war, and the emoluments graduated to the pay of the army. This would save us two-thirds of the expense and cut off that crowd of loafers who are constantly deterred from entering into any productive labor by the hope of obtaining some time or other reward of dirty political work. If the system of collection is once established on an expensive basis it will remain permanent until the people demand a reform; and a reform of that sort is never made by a party in power when it can be avoided. A vast patronage is secured by holding out such emoluments as prizes before the election. The administration is already furnished with a lever in the civil lists, the power of which has been demonstrated to our cost in times past, and every effort to increase its power should be withheld by the people as an invasion of their rights. Less expensive machinery for the collection of the taxes was suggested to Congress—Why was it not accepted? Are we not fighting for our national existence, placing voluntarily upon our shoulders burdens of terrible magnitude? Should we not endeavor to economize now if ever? Or shall we take advantage of the great evils we must endure as excuses for further evils to strengthen a faction and build up a great corrupt party to sap the wealth of the country and destroy its reproductive capacity? Let members of Congress answer, while they have the power, or overboard they go at the next election.—Boston Herald.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS.

THE MASSACHUSETTS NAUTICAL SCHOOL.—The Massachusetts State Nautical School Ship, entered our harbor yesterday, having on board two members of the board of Trustees, with their families in addition to the officers and members of the school.

These gentlemen, B. L. Allen, Esq., of Boston, and Hon. Wm. Fabens of Marblehead, together with Capt. Matthews invited the Mayor and the City Council and others, ourselves among them to visit the ship. Accordingly at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in company with the members of the City Council, we embarked on board the Fauny and were duly convoyed on board the Massachusetts. The following members of the Council attended—His Honor the Mayor being absent on other duties: Mr. President Taylor, Messrs. Coggeshall, Stoddard, Bush, Simmons, French, Aldermen Powell, Albro, Burdick, Townsend, Almon, together with Mr. Sergeant Ward.

Upon arriving at the ship we were received by the gentlemen Trustees and the Superintendent, to whom such member of the Council were presented in turn. The following is a list of the officers and men of the ship:

Richard Matthews, Sup't. and Capt. M. S. Eldredge, Teacher, 1st Officer, D. Russell, 2nd " A. Biany, B. B. Swasy, O. H. Parker, E. M. Elton, C. D. Barber, G. Mandiff, A. G. St. Clear, Capt. Birth Deck G. Lovell, J. H. Wessell, E. Keelook, " J. V. Pomroy, Cockswain,

We were immediately taken in charge by the gentlemen before named, and conducted throughout the ship. Everything was in the most admirable order, and every arrangement seemed to have been made with particular reference to convenience and comfort, and at the same time in accordance with the most rigid economy. There are 148 pupils in the school, averaging nearly 14 years of age. The ship is worked by these boys mostly, there being, as will be seen by our list, but 4 older seamen on board. Out of this number of pupils there was not a single case of sickness, nor had there been for a month. There is no regular Surgeon attached to the ship, Mr. Eldredge the Teacher acting in that capacity, when needed. There is no regular Chaplain attached; clergymen of different denominations being invited in turn to preach on board, thus preventing a spirit of sectarianism from being fostered—a spirit almost inseparable from a regular Chaplaincy of any denomination.

We repaired to the school-room where most of our time was passed. The boys were all present, clad in a neat sailor uniform of blue. They are divided into two watches, the starboard watch, who occupy the school-room during the morning, and a port watch who are in school during the afternoon. The pupils went through with exercises in mental arithmetic, history geography and reading; in all of which they exhibited a most remarkable proficiency. The exercises were interspersed with singing, which the pupils seemed to perform with a heartiness that reminded one of the happy carols of youth under the roof of the "old homestead," and not within the environs of penal discipline. And as we heard the happy voices of so many noble boys rescued from the paths of infamy and degradation—victims it may be of parental neglect—and placed in the paths of virtue and on the road to usefulness, we felt a glow of gratitude to the Christian and enlightened philanthropy that conceived so humanizing a plan of discipline for the vagrant, and recused the old plan of punishment from the formidable objections that have always existed against it, especially as a corrective for the transgressions of youth. It was a beautiful sight and stamped the whole affair as a complete success, and reflected great credit upon their teacher, Mr. Eldredge.

After an hour passed thus pleasantly, the members of the Council having been exceedingly gratified, a gentleman present (W. D. Lake, Esq.) addressed the school, in behalf of the visitors, and thanked the officers for their kind efforts, every means of information as well as to afford the school.

We learn that Ben. Franklin's grand boy turned up in Philadelphia on the 1st, at the veteran celebration. His name is Robert Carr, now 65 years old. Carr was an errand boy in the office of Benjamin Franklin. He was an apprentice—one of the first—to Benjamin Franklin Baché, Dr. Franklin's grandson. For twenty five years he was a printer at the very head of his profession, having received the first gold medal from the American Association of Booksellers assembled at New York in 1801, for general excellence in printing.

The productive capacity of New England and New York exceeds that of the entire fifteen slave States by $61,000,000, while the State of New York alone, in this respect, $65,000,000, in excess of the entire States together; and the annual products of the little State of Massachusetts exceed in value the entire cotton crop of the South, as we left the ship, and standing on the Southern States; at an average the top of the mast, presented a picturesque and curious sight. The Council were honored with a salute as we steamed away toward "Old Ironsides," and we venture to assert that we speak the minds of all present, when we say, that it was an occasion not soon to be forgotten, and to be remembered only with gratification. We close our article with some interesting facts regard to this institution, gleaned during our visit.

ITS ORIGIN.—There is in the State of Massachusetts, a reform school at Westboro. About two and a half years since a part of the building occupied by this school, was destroyed by fire. It was then that the idea was conceived of starting a Naval Branch of this State establishment.

A bill was prepared recommending such a plan, and reported to the Senate by Hon. Mr. Fabens, now one of the Board of Trustees, and who has been prominently identified with the movement from its inception.

GOVERNMENT.

The institution is governed by a Board of five Trustees, appointed as follows: Three are appointed by the Governor and Council. One by the Board of Trade of the city of Boston. One by the Marine Society of the city of Boston.

EXPENSE.—The whole current expense annually is $24,000. The Superintendent receives $1200, and the Teacher $600, surely not large or extravagant salaries, especially considering their duties. Other officials, with higher salaries, would do well to take a hint from these faithful gentlemen.

FUTURES.—Any committing magistrate has the power to commit to either the Westboro' Reformatory School or to the Ship—during minority, and usually gives the delinquent his choice—especially if he be a lad of good physique. They usually prefer the ship, and so contented and happy are they, that when the younger are removed to make room for older and stronger boys, they invariably shed tears of bitter sorrow, as though forced to leave the emblem of a happy home. When the pupils are duly prepared for nautical service they are shipped either in the merchant service or the navy. A year, in most instances, makes these lads thoroughly posted in seamens' duties, fully equal to "old salts." They always have their choice, and are never placed in the naval service except by their own free choice. During a little more than a year, during which Capt. Matthews has been in command, 214 have been shipped. The shipment of a pupil acts as a pardon, and releases him from all penalties and disabilities which were created by his sentence. The reputation of the School stands very high. A clergyman at the West applied for the admission of his son, and only withdrew when told the nature of the institution. Applications have been made by Lieutenants in the Revenue service.

VISITORS.

We are requested to state that the ship has gone to-day to Fall River and will return here on Thursday, at which time the Steamer Fauny, Capt. Carr, will make regular trips to and from her. We are also requested by the Trustees and Superintendent, to say that on the return of the ship, they will be pleased to receive and entertain on board, the citizens of Newport generally, and especially the ladies—to whom a most cordial invitation is hereby extended—the object being to impress our people with the beneficial, as well as the sunshiny "character" of our nautical institutions, youth from the temptations of depravity, and fitting them for nautical service—a service so useful for the defence of our country, as well as in carrying on her extensive merchandise.

In conclusion, we can add, also, that it is an Institution worthy of the State wherein it originated—Massachusetts—that noble State, whose soil was first consecrated by the feet of the pilgrim fathers, the pioneer State of all that is noble in our institutions. Massachusetts, who ranks among her sons the noblest representatives of every department of Science, Literature and the Arts, and who has always furnished us the highest examples of the most exalted patriotism—a State worthy of that noble tribute which a late statesman, whose reputation is not only national but world wide—paid her on the floor of the United States Senate in his memorable controversy with Hayne—and which is familiar to every school boy in the land, in which he sits of her, among other things, these words: "where American Liberty raised its first voice, and where its youth was nurtured and sustained, there it still lives in the strength of its manhood, and full of its original spirit."

The Petersburg Express of Thursday has the following:

Mobile, July 8.—Passengers by a flag of truce from New Orleans report Baton Rouge recaptured by Van Dorn with 1500 prisoners.

The Petersburg Express says General

Richmond, July 9.—Ten thousand

Yankees reached Warden yesterday.

CONGRESS TO ADJOURN WEDNESDAY.

THE ROBBER STATE NEWS AND

Washington, July 14.—The House has passed the Senate resolution to adjourn Congress on Wednesday.

The Border States Senators and Representatives, after their interview with the President, on Saturday, were, at their request, furnished by him with propositions in writing upon the subject of emancipation, according with suggestions heretofore officially communicated to Congress. The propositions have been referred to a committee for a reply, which will be considered at the adjourned meeting.

RELIABLE NEWS FROM VICKSBURG.—We are indebted to C. D. Hammatt Esq., for the following extract from a letter received to day from his son, who is master-mate on board the Gunboat "Winona." The letter is dated above Vicksburg July 4—1862" and mailed at Cairo on the 10th inst:

"The mail leaves in twely minutes.—We have not had a general battle since the 29th of last month. No news to communicate. Davis' mortars are shelling the town from above, and Porters from below. The rebels shoot all round us, but have hit none of our vessels as yet."

Cowardice Among Officers.—General

Keyes in his report of the battle of Fair Oaks makes some remarks upon the disgraceful subject of cowardice, from which we make an extract below. It is to be wished that such an energetic policy as that expressed by General Keyes had been generally followed, and that no foppish cowards bearing commissions had been suitably dealt with, as required by the discipline of every good army. The general says:

"The mail leaves in twely minutes.—We have not had a general battle since the 29th of last month. No news to communicate. Davis' mortars are shelling the town from above, and Porters from below. The rebels shoot all round us, but have hit none of our vessels as yet."

NOT YET RENTED.—We are requested by Mrs. Murray to say that the statement in Mr. Smith's "list of cottages rented" regarding her houses is incorrect; neither of which have been disposed of for this season.

HOUSES RENTED.—We learn from Mr.

Alfred Smith that three more houses have been rented since the publication of the list yesterday. In a day or two we shall republish the list with additions.

C. J. BLIVEN,

(Formerly of the ATLANTIC HOUSE.)

HAVING LEASED the building next west of the BELLEVUE HOUSE, has fitted rooms in a magnificent style, where he will be most happy to entertain all his old friends, and as many new ones as may favor him with a call, on SATURDAY, MAY 24th, 1862.

N. B.—Gentlemen can be accommodated with nice, airy lodging-rooms, by the day, week or season.

Give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.
